Subject: Child Support Guidelines

My comment does not pertain to any sections currently being changed. I feel that since there has been an economic adjustment (increase) to the support tables, there should also be an adjustment (increase) made to the percentage a non-custodial parent is allowed for other children in the home.

You have made increases to the support tables for children not living with a parent and have not given the same consideration to those that do. It seems unfair to say that more money should go to children not living in your home when you have not increased the amount that should stay in the home for those who do.

Thanks for your time.
